STARRY NIGHT: A proposal

Starry Night is an annual street festival of music, art, and awareness of select social issues. It is a venue for artistic and creative expression and participation through music, merchandise, and hands-on activities.

Starry Night has a global/educational component as well and seeks to expose the public to specific needs/causes through information, conversations, film, etc. It is an extension of Campus House [pcch.org] and Greyhouse Coffee [greyhousecoffee.com] and is designed to be a catalyst for relational community, both with the participants and with the local businesses, city, and art community

The theme of Starry Night this year is on the power of story – inspiring learning to change the world. Storytelling is the first step in inspiring children towards literacy and education, which in turn is the first step in alleviating poverty, working toward stability, and changing the world. We feel that this is a cause that could use more attention, is accessible to a wide range of people, and has profound and far-reaching implications for our community and world through ongoing ownership and hands-on involvement. The thread of “story” will be woven into each component of the festival.

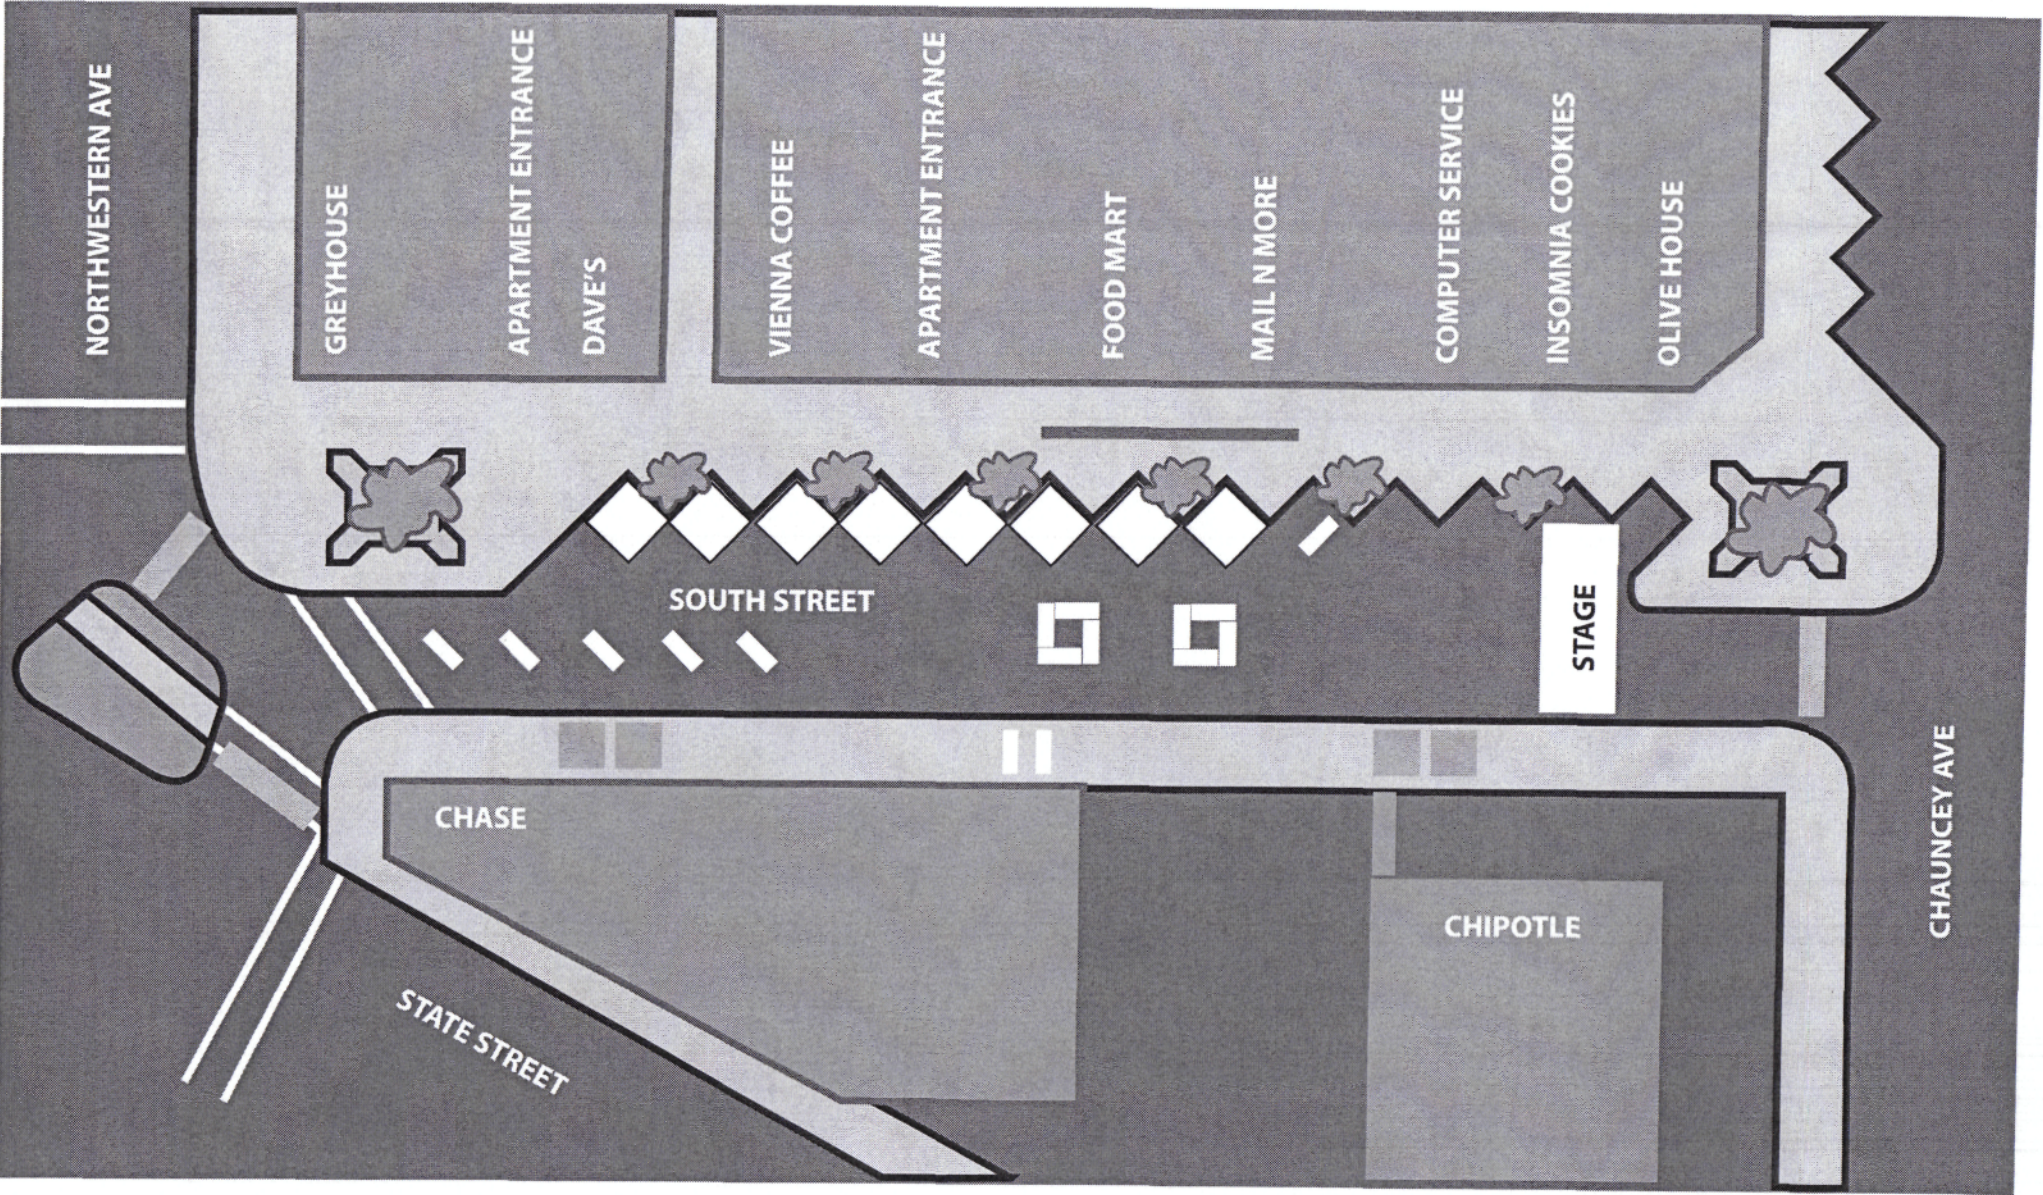

Possible organizations that will benefit from Starry Night in both financial contributions and awareness:

- Miami Elementary School Literacy Program [Lafayette School Corp.]
- Tippecanoe and West Lafayette Libraries
- Lafayette Adult Resource Academy [LARA]
- Darian Book Aid Plan
- First Book [<http://www.firstbook.org/>]
- World Books
- Teach for America
- Books For Africa
- National Center for Family Literacy
- Room to Read
- Oxfam education initiative
- World Fund

Starry Night intends to take place on South Street, between Northwestern and Chauncey Avenues, and will include merchant tables/tents in each parking spot, tables for non-profits organizations in clustered tables down the middle of the street, leading to a main stage. There will also be designated areas for hands-on arts and crafts. Additional lights may be strung into the trees and swaged above the street. Please see attached image for proposed layout of the event.

Starry Night is scheduled to happen on Friday, September 18th, from 7:00 pm to 11:00 pm, with tear-down concluding by midnight. Rain date would be Friday, September 25th.
